

TWO CHICAGO GANGSTERS ARE SLAIN

BUCKLEY ASKS TO TESTIFY IN BEER PROBE

ASKS TO FACE GRAND JURY BECAUSE NAME LINKED WITH CASE

State Treasurer Declares To Be Tool Of Three In Transactions

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 31.—State Treasurer Bert B. Buckley, after asking that he be permitted to testify before the federal grand jury in connection with an investigation of activities of Cincinnati breweries, was to be presented to the jury today.

Federal District Attorney Haven E. Mau of Cincinnati, who is conducting the inquiry, said the letter would be submitted to the jury although Mau was unable to say whether the state treasurer would be summoned to testify.

Buckley asked permission to appear before the jury after the circulation of rumors which persistently linked his name with the probe.

The state treasurer brought the rumors "out into the open" Saturday night in a statement in which he charged a Columbus federal prohibition official and two Cincinnati attorneys were attempting to "frame" him.

According to the story Buckley said he wants to tell the jury, he was made a "tool" of the three men in transactions which first involved obtaining immunity for one of the attorneys and later for furnishing advance information to Cincinnati breweries relative to prospective inspection by federal agents.

The attorney seeking immunity, according to Buckley, was involved in the purchase of beer from a brewery, the beer to be used by World War veterans en route to the American Legion convention in Texas.

The brewery selling the beer was raided, Buckley said, and circumstances surrounding the attorney's purchase of the beer were learned.

Buckley, in his statement, said he interceded on behalf of the attorney and that subsequently the prohibition official sent "tips" to breweries through him.

Buckley denied any wrongdoing, but admitted he might have been "indiscreet."

Buckley explained that his intercession on behalf of the lawyer was to the prohibition official who told the attorney "not to worry."

The state treasurer said he was not very familiar with the contents of the telegrams subsequently sent through him by the dry officer but that he supposed the telegrams had something to do with the case against the attorney involved in the beer purchase.

The dry agent in question refused today to comment on Buckley's statement. He said he would have no comment to make until the grand jury session is complete.

Mau said the grand jury may report late today or early tomorrow. He decided to discuss Buckley's statement and refused an interview.

The beer inquiry has been underway for more than a week. Officials of almost every brewery in Cincinnati have been summoned.

Buckley, it was said, was linked with the inquiry by Western Union telegrams.

The local manager of the Western Union and telegram files were subpoenaed last week.

Buckley's statement created a sensation here. It named the dry official and the two attorneys and flatly charged that the three men were conspiring to have him indicted for violating the dry laws.

OFFERS TO SERVE PEN TERM FOR OLD LOVER

LA CROSSE, Wis., Dec. 31.—Because her own children refused to accept her Christmas presents, Mrs. Helen Bartovich has offered to go to prison for the murder of her husband in place of John Beier, her former lover, who is serving a life term for the crime.

Beier, who has served eight years of a life sentence for killing Mrs. Bartovich's husband, was given a five day "leave of absence" this week so that he could come to La Crosse and accused his former paramour of committing the murder and blaming it on him.

After confronting Mrs. Bartovich the convict confessed that his plan was a hoax to obtain a few days out of prison and he was taken back to Waupun.

Now Mrs. Bartovich says that she feels so badly because her own children are punishing her Christmas gifts as a sign of their disapproval of her former conduct with Beier that she is willing to take his place in prison.

A few months later Dr. Mesrirow's wife sued for divorce, naming Mme. Pavloska as the woman who had estranged her husband's affections. The singer defended herself by explaining that her relations with the specialist had been nothing more than those of doctor and patient.

Yesterday Judge Harry M. Fisher granted Mrs. Mesrirow a divorce on a new petition charging desertion. The doctor did not contest the suit. He agreed to pay her $45 a week alimony and Mme. Pavloska signed the agreement as a guarantor for five years.

OTTAWA, O., Dec. 31.—George Borchers, 24, was near death in a Lima Hospital today after being slugged and shot near his home here. Borchers had just placed his car in his garage when two men accosted him. Police are undecided as to whether Borchers' assailants were holdup men.

HE LIKES DOMINOES

STATE READY IN CASE AGAINST HELDMAN
CANTON, O., Dec. 31.—The state today is expected to bare its case against Wilbur O. Heldman, Lorain furnace salesman charged with the "moral murder" of his wife, Margaret, the phantom gun woman. Mrs. Heldman committed suicide Dec. 13, while Heldman was bringing her to Canton to surrender her for the murder of Vernon Fearn, Waco coal dealer with whom she had admitted indiscretions.

A dozen witnesses were summoned to appear today before Justice of the Peace Donald Smyth and tell what they knew of the Heldmans' married life, and the hearings may result in temporary freedom for Heldman.

If Smyth finds the state's evidence is insufficient to bind Heldman over to the grand jury the furnace salesman will be freed from jail.

In any event, County Prosecutor Henry Harter said, the evidence will be laid before the county grand jury on Jan. 7.

Harter and Coroner T. C. McQuate filed the "moral murder" charge against Heldman after it was brought out that Heldman was cruel to his wife and told her she "probably would get the electric chair" for killing Fearn.

McQuate contends that Heldman's statements go overboard in making Heldman directly responsible for her death.

HEAVY TOLL OF DEAD IN STATE OVER WEEK-END

By THE UNITED PRESS

Grade crossing crashes and other automobile accidents, resulted in a heavy toll of dead and injured in Ohio over the week end, a survey by the United Press today revealed.

Five persons lost their lives in greater Dayton.

Three of them were killed in a grade crossing crash at Miamisburg, a suburb.

They were Mrs. Noah Burkett, 46; Charles McCoy, 60, and a Mrs. Wade, all of Crown Point.

Two others, Mrs. Elizabeth Burkett and Lucille Sears who lived with her, were seriously injured.

The accident occurred when McCoy drove his car onto the tracks in the path of a speeding B. & O. train.

Joseph Horn, 50, Dayton, was killed when his automobile crashed into a pole.

M. T. McCabe, 60, Eldorado, O., died from injuries received when his car was struck by a Pennsylvania train.

Two deaths were recorded in Cincinnati.

Jerry Davis, 26, was seriously injured when his car collided with a trolley.

Mrs. Emma Bogart, 60, was killed when she was hit by two automobiles, both of which failed to stop.

Robert Burns, 40, father of five children, was killed at Circleville when an N. & W. train hit his car.

INTER-PARTY TIFF EXPECTED FROM REP. HULL'S TARIFF ACTION

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—An inter-party tariff battle which will last through most of 1929 was assured today by the action of Rep. Cordell Hull, of Tennessee, former Democratic national chairman, in calling his party to battle for downward revision of high protective tariffs.

Hull issued a statement predicting a disastrous economic future, internationally and domestically, for the United States, especially if the Republicans raise tariffs generally as advocated by some leaders.

In his position on the ways and means committee Hull will be in a position to lead the fight against the Republican measure which Chairman Hawley plans to have ready in April for the anticipated Hoover extra session of congress.

Hull struck at the Republicans' chief tariff thesis, in a passage asserting that increased tariffs on farm products, held to be necessary for farm relief by the majority party, will really injure the farmers more than it will help them.

New and changed post war conditions demand foreign markets rather than excessive tariff protection, he said, characterizing present rates as too high. This contradicts the stand made during the presidential campaign by Al Smith, who advocated that he called a competitive tariff and promised to give the farm protection as well as industry.

"American economic policy can no longer ignore the fact that since 1914 we have changed from a debtor and small-surplus nation to the greatest creditor and actual potential surplus-producing nation in the world, that, due not to tariffs, but to our superior labor, machinery, horsepower, and to mass production, we maintain higher wages and living standards and lower production costs in an increasing number of industries, than any other country," Hull said.

Now Mrs. Bartovich says that she feels so badly because her own children are punishing her Christmas gifts as a sign of their disapproval of her former conduct with Beier that she is willing to take his place in prison.

A few months later Dr. Mesrirow's wife sued for divorce, naming Mme. Pavloska as the woman who had estranged her husband's affections. The singer defended herself by explaining that her relations with the specialist had been nothing more than those of doctor and patient.

PEACE IN CONGRESS HOPED IN PLAN LAID BEFORE SENATE BODY

Kellogg Anti-War Treaty To Be First Brought Up For Senate

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—A new plan for congressional peace, more hopeful of realization than the discarded proposals, was laid before senate leaders today in hopes they might ring in the new year more happily than they rang out the fighting old one.

Under this proposed arrangement, the Kellogg anti-war treaty would be considered as soon as the senate reconvenes Thursday and would be held in advanced position until a vote is taken. The naval cruiser building bill would be permitted to keep its prior place, too, so nothing could prevent it from being voted upon as soon as the treaty is ratified.

When these two measures are out of the way then the senate could proceed with the equalization-feelers McNary-Haugen bill, as revised, or take up the Vane election contest matter sought by Senator James A. Reed of Missouri.

The plan was worked out by Vice-President-elect Charles Curtis who now has decided to continue as floor leader until he assumes his new duties March 4. While Curtis does not expect all factions to agree to the arrangement, he believes he can control a majority and that it will work out his way when the balloting begins.

As the situation now stands both the treaty and the naval bill are the unfinished business with the naval bill being mentioned first. They have been played against each other by minority opponents of both hoping to jockey the measures into a legislative stalemate.

It is understood generally Chairman Borah of the foreign relations committee will be recognized when the senate reconvenes and he will move the senate into executive session for consideration of the treaty. Then he will propose that it be discussed in open executive session and a showdown will come immediately.

This appears to be the only way a solution satisfactory to a majority can be worked out and it has some chance of success than any of the agreements thus far proposed.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF FORD WELCOMED
DETROIT, Dec. 31.—Although tempered with the statement local unemployed men will be given preference in announcement by the Ford Motor Co., today that 30,000 new men will be hired before March 1, brought optimism to Detroit business and civic leaders.

The new employees will increase Ford production by 20 per cent.

Thomas E. Dolan, general superintendent of the city's public welfare department said the warning for unemployed to stay away from Detroit could not be over emphasized.

Under the present working plans the Ford output for a five day week averages 33,500 cars weekly. The new working plan will bring the schedule to 40,000 cars weekly.

Only the Detroit plants are affected by the new order, but the plan is expected to be extended to other cities soon.

Coupled with the announcement was a warning from the Employers' Association of Detroit that seasonal unemployment and a normal surplus of labor will allow the new workers to be recruited from Detroit.

City officials expressed satisfaction with the Ford statement that unemployed here would be given preference in the new jobs.

Figured at minimum Ford scales employment of the new men will add almost $40,000,000 yearly to the Ford payroll. The company is far behind in advance orders for new model Fords and production capacity has not been reached since changing from the old model.

Gas to End War

'STUBBY' M'GOVERN, 'GUNNER' M'FADDEN KILLED BY STRANGER

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—Hugh "Stubby" McGovern, beer runner and former henchman of Al Capone, and William "Gunner" McFadden, 35, a pal of McGovern, were shot to death early today in the Granada Cafe, a night club.

George Mahoney was held in the shooting.

The two gangsters were dining and dancing in the night club with two other men and four women when a stranger approached their table, drew a pistol and started shooting.

McGovern drew his gun and leaped to the south side of the room. McFadden whipped out his automatic and ran to the north side of the dance floor.

As they ran the stranger continued firing and the two gangsters reeled. Suddenly McGovern sank to the floor with a bullet through his heart.

The stranger whirled and sent a bullet into McFadden's heart. Police Sergeant Tim Sullivan, at the cigar counter when the shooting started, dashed through the panic stricken crowd to the dance floor. He found Mahoney standing among the deserted tables with a pistol in his hand.

Mahoney, who was not immediately identified as an enemy of McGovern or McFadden, offered no resistance and refused to answer questions.

There were 200 men and women in the cafe when the shooting occurred. They scattered in panic when the gun battle started.

McGovern at one time was the chief lieutenant of Al Capone, gangland overlord of Chicago.

McGovern was known here as a man who was not to be trifled with. He had the reputation of being "bad" and a number of killings have been traced to his activities, though none was laid directly to him. Several recent machine gunnings on the south side were attributed to efforts of his enemies to "get" McGovern.

McFadden was one of the lesser lights of gangland, but of late had risen to a position of importance as one of McGovern's lieutenants.

McGovern rose from "back of the yards" to a position of great prominence in gangland. Ralph Sheldon took him under his wing five years ago and for the next four years the two rarely were separated. McGovern had been arrested in connection with several brutal murders. Once he was accused of killing a negro delinquent, "to see how he would die."

Gangsters told of how he would die. McGovern would kill for nothing more than the doubtful "thrill" of murder.

For four years he acted as Sheldon's chief bodyguard. Where Sheldon was found, there would be found McGovern, watching his chief.

There came a rift last spring. McGovern accused Sheldon of "shooting" him as much as a thousand dollars a week in the beer earnings from the south side which they divided.

McGovern once shot Sheldon four times. Sheldon went to New Mexico to recover his health and McGovern took over the south side beer industry. He met strong opposition, however, and his success was small.

Sheldon returned to Chicago a few months ago and it was predicted then that McGovern would "get" him.

It was not known over what McGovern and Mahoney had argued.

TWO CHICAGO GANGSTERS ARE SLAIN

BUCKLEY ASKS TO TESTIFY IN BEER PROBE

ASKS TO FACE GRAND JURY BECAUSE NAME LINKED WITH CASE

State Treasurer Declares To Be Tool Of Three In Transactions

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 31.—State Treasurer Bert B. Buckley's letter asking that he be permitted to testify before the federal grand jury in connection with an investigation of activities of Cincinnati breweries, was to be presented to the jury today.

Federal District Attorney Hawthorn E. Mau of Cincinnati, who is conducting the inquiry, said the letter would be submitted to the jury although Mau was unable to say whether the state treasurer would be summoned to testify.

Buckley asked permission to appear before the jury after the circulation of rumors which persistently linked his name with the probe.

The state treasurer brought the rumors "out into the open" Saturday night in a statement in which he charged a Columbus federal prohibition official and two Cincinnati attorneys were attempting to "frame" him.

According to the story Buckley said he wants to tell the jury, he was made a "tool" of the three men in transactions which first involved obtaining immunity for one of the attorneys and later for furnishing advance information to Cincinnati breweries relative to prospective inspection by federal agents.

The attorney seeking immunity, according to Buckley, was involved in the purchase of beer from a brewery, the beer to be used by World War veterans en route to the American Legion convention in Texas.

The brewery selling the beer was raided, Buckley said, and circumstances surrounding the attorney's purchase of the beer were learned.

Buckley, in his statement, said he interceded on behalf of the attorney and that subsequently the prohibition official sent "tips" to breweries through him.

Buckley denied any wrongdoing, but admitted he might have been "indiscreet."

Buckley explained that his intercession on behalf of the lawyer was to the prohibition official who told the attorney "not to worry."

The state treasurer said he was not very familiar with the contents of the telegrams subsequently sent through him by the dry agent but that he supposed the telegrams had something to do with the case against the attorney involved in the beer purchase.

The dry agent in question refused today to comment on Buckley's statement. He said he would have no comment to make until the grand jury session is complete.

Mau said the grand jury may report late today or early tomorrow. He decided to discuss Buckley's statement and refused an interview.

The beer inquiry has been underway for more than a week. Officials of almost every brewery in Cincinnati have been summoned.

Buckley, it was said, was linked with the inquiry by Western Union telegrams.

Buckley's statement created a sensation here. It named the dry official and the two attorneys and flatly charged that the three men were conspiring to have him indicted for violating the dry laws.

NEW LICENSE LAW IS SANCTIONED BY BODY

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 31.—Compulsory licenses for automobile drivers, a project sponsored by the Ohio State Safety Council have received the sanction of the joint legislative committee on economy in public service, according to information received here today.

The proposed legislation is meant as a check to reckless or incompetent persons.

All persons now operating machines would receive the license without an examination, and would not renewals each year unless sufficient "black marks" were checked against their record.

Suspension or revocation of license would follow certain violations of traffic regulations, such as continual infraction of speed laws, failure to stop after an accident, and driving while intoxicated.

A physical and mechanical test, administered by local police officers, would be required for a new license after the driver's original certificate has been revoked.

A fee of $1 would be charged for the original license and four subsequent renewals. The revenue produced by such fees would be used for the enforcement of the traffic law.

NEW YEAR'S HOLIDAY

New Year's Day will be observed as a holiday by the Xenia Post Office, Postmaster C. S. Frazier announces. No deliveries will be made by either city or rural carriers. OFFERS TO SERVE PEN TERM FOR OLD LOVER

LA CROSSE, Wis., Dec. 31.—Because her own children refused to accept her Christmas presents, Mrs. Helen Bartovich has offered to go to prison for the murder of her husband in place of John Beier, her former lover, who is serving a life term for the crime.

Beier, who has served eight years of a life sentence for killing Mrs. Bartovich's husband, was given a five day "leave of absence" this week so that he could come to La Crosse and accused his former paramour of committing the murder and blaming it on him.

After confronting Mrs. Bartovich the convict confessed that his plan was a hoax to obtain a few days out of prison and he was taken back to Waupun.

Now Mrs. Bartovich says that she feels so badly because her own children are spurning her Christmas gifts as a sign of their disapproval of her former conduct with Beier that she is willing to take his place in prison.

DIVA AND DOCTOR AT ALTAR IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—An eighteen-month romance involving a doctor and a diva reached its climax at the marriage altar today.

The principals were Mme. Irene Pavloska, soprano of the Chicago Civic Opera, and Dr. Maurice E. Mesrow, an eye, ear, nose and throat specialist. They met in July 1927 when the specialist was called to the opera star's bedside during a critical illness.

A few months later Dr. Mesrow's wife sued for divorce, naming Mme. Pavloska as the woman who had estranged her husband's affections. The singer defended herself by explaining that her relations with the specialist had been nothing more than those of doctor and patient.

HEAVY TOLL OF DEAD IN STATE OVER WEEK-END

By THE UNITED PRESS

Grade crossing crashes and other automobile accidents, resulted in a heavy toll of dead and injured in Ohio over the week-end, a survey by the United Press today revealed.

Five persons lost their lives in greater Dayton.

Three of them were killed in a grade crossing crash at Miami, a suburb.

They were Mrs. Noah Burkett, 46; Charles McCoy, 60, and a Mrs. Wade, all of Crown Point.

Two others, Mrs. Elizabeth Burkett and Lucille Sears who lived with her, were seriously injured.

The accident occurred when McCoy drove his car onto the tracks in the path of a speeding B. & O. train.

Joseph Horn, 50, Dayton, was killed when his automobile crashed into a pole.

M. T. McCabe, 60, Eldorado, O., died from injuries received when his car was struck by a Pennsylvania train.

Two deaths were recorded in Cincinnati.

Jerry Davison, 26, was seriously injured when his car collided with a trolley.

Mrs. Emma Bogart, 60, was killed when she was hit by two automobiles, both of which failed to stop.

Robert Burns, 40, father of five children, was killed at Circleville when an N. & W. train hit his car.

INTER-PARTY TIFF EXPECTED FROM REP. HULL'S TARIFF ACTION

Sorry Economic Future Forecast by Hull With Tariff Raise

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—An inter-party tariff battle which will last through most of 1929 was assured today by the action of Rep. Cordell Hull, of Tennessee, former Democratic national chairman, in calling his party to battle for downward revision of high protective tariffs.

Hull issued a statement predicting a disastrous economic future, internationally and domestically, for the United States, especially if the Republicans raise tariffs generally as advocated by some leaders.

In his position on the ways and means committee Hull will be in a position to lead the fight against the Republican measure which Chairman Hawley plans to have ready in April for the anticipated Hoover extra session of congress.

Hull struck at the Republicans' chief tariff thesis, in a passage asserting that increased tariffs on farm products,—held to be necessary for farm relief by the majority party,—will really injure the farmers more than it will help them.

New and changed post war conditions demand foreign markets rather than excessive tariff protection, he said, characterizing present rates as too high. This contradicts the stand made during the presidential campaign by Al Smith, who advocated that he called a competitive tariff and promised to give the farm protection as well as industry.

"American economic policy can no longer ignore the fact that since 1914 we have changed from a debtor and small-surplus nation to the greatest creditor and actual surplus-producing nation in the world, that, due to our superior labor, machinery, horsepower, and to mass production, we maintain higher wages and living standards than any other country," Hull said.

COPY "BOY" DIES, TRIBUNE MOURNS

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—It's "30" for Jimmy Durkin, "the world's greatest copy boy."

"Thirty" the copy symbol that indicates to newspapermen that the work is finished—was written on Jimmy's record by heart disease after thirty-three years of carrying copy in the editorial rooms of the Chicago Tribune.

The longest story in the Tribune this morning was devoted to Jimmy. It occupied the choice position on the first page and ran two and one-half columns long.

Jimmy, christened James Aloysius, was forty-nine years old and had bossed reporters and editors since 1895 until early Sunday when stricken on his way home after "putting the paper to bed."

One of Jimmy's traditional duties was to release the reporters for the night with "all right there, gentles, if you're clear," meaning they could go home if they had finished their work.

SLUGGED AND SHOT

OTTAWA, O., Dec. 31.—George Borchers, 24, was near death in a Lima Hospital today after being slugged and shot near his home here. Borchers had just placed his car in his garage when two men accosted him. Police are undecided as to whether Borchers' assailants were holdup men.

SHOT BY FATHER

BHARTON, O., Dec. 31.—Frank Croft, Bhartton, was shot and wounded, perhaps fatally, by his father, James B. Croft, 73, here last night. Police said the shooting climaxed a drinking party.

He Likes Dominoes

There will be no card parties at the mansion of Ohio's chief executive at Columbus during the next two years. But there is one pastime that Governor-elect Myers Y. Cooper does like, and that is the old-fashioned game of dominoes. He is shown above engaged in it.

STATE READY IN CASE AGAINST HELDMAN

CANTON, O., Dec. 31.—The state today is expected to bare its case against Wilbur O. Heldman, Lorain furnace salesman charged with the "moral murder" of his wife, Margaret, the phantom gun woman.

Mrs. Heldman committed suicide Dec. 13, while Heldman was bringing her to Canton to surrender her for the murder of Vernon Fearn.

Waco coal dealer with whom she had admitted indiscretions.

A dozen witnesses were summoned to appear today before Justice of the Peace Donald Smyth and tell what they knew of the Heldmans' married life, and the hearings may result in temporary freedom for Heldman.

If Smyth finds the state's evidence is insufficient to bind Heldman over to the grand jury the furnace salesman will be freed from jail.

In any event, County Prosecutor Henry Harter said, the evidence will be laid before the county grand jury on Jan. 7.

Harter and Coroner T. C. McQuate filed the "moral murder" charge against Heldman after it was brought out that Heldman was cruel to his wife and told her she "probably would get the electric chair" for killing Fearn.

McQuate contends that Heldman's statements go overboard, thus making Heldman directly responsible for her death.

TWO TOLEDO MEN DIE MYSTERIOUSLY

TOLEDO, O., Dec. 31.—An anonymous threat received five weeks ago and disregarded, cost the life of Joseph Misiewicz, 20, here Sunday.

Misiewicz was ambushed and shot as he walked towards his home. Relatives later said he had received a death threat, the nature of which was not learned.

PEACE IN CONGRESS HOPED IN PLAN LAID BEFORE SENATE BODY

Kellogg Anti-War Treaty To Be First Brought Up For Senate

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—A new plan for congressional peace, more hopeful of realization than the discarded proposals, was laid before senate leaders today in hopes they might ring in the new year more happily than they rang out the fighting old one.

Under this proposed arrangement, the Kellogg anti-war treaty would be considered as soon as the senate reconvenes Thursday and would be held in advanced position until a vote is taken. The naval cruiser building bill would be permitted to keep its prior place, too, so nothing could prevent it from being voted upon as soon as the treaty is ratified.

When these two measures are out of the way then the senate could proceed with the equalization-free McNary-Haugen bill, as revised, or take up the Vane election contest matter sought by Senator James A. Reed of Missouri.

The plan was worked out by Vice-President-elect Charles Curtis who now has decided to continue as floor leader until he assumes his new duties March 4. While Curtis does not expect all factions to agree to the arrangement, he believes he can control a majority and that it will work out his way when the fighting begins.

As the situation now stands both the treaty and the naval bill are the unfinished business with the navy bill being mentioned first. They have been played against each other by minority opponents of both hoping to jockey the measures into a legislative stalemate.

It is understood generally Chairman Borah of the foreign relations committee will be recognized when the senate reconvenes and he will move the senate into executive session for consideration of the treaty. Then he will propose that it be discussed in open executive session and a showdown will come immediately.

This appears to be the only way a solution satisfactory to a majority can be worked out and it has more chance of success than any of the agreements thus far proposed.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF FORD WELCOMED

DETROIT, Dec. 31.—Although tempered with the statement local unemployed men will be given preference, announcement by the Ford Motor Co., today that 30,000 new men will be hired before March 1, brought optimism to Detroit business and civic leaders.

The new employees will increase Ford production by 20 per cent.

Thomas E. Dolan, general superintendent of the city's public welfare department said the warning for unemployed to stay away from Detroit could not be over emphasized.

Under the present working plans the Ford output for a five day week averages 32,500 cars weekly. The new working plan will bring the schedule to 40,000 cars weekly.

Only the Detroit plants are affected by the new order, but the plan is expected to be extended to other cities soon.

Coupled with the announcement was a warning from the Employers' Association of Detroit that seasonal unemployment and a normal surplus of labor will allow the new workers to be recruited from Detroit.

City officials expressed satisfaction with the Ford statement that unemployed here would be given preference in the new jobs.

Figured at minimum Ford scales employment of the new men will add almost $10,000,000 yearly to the Ford payroll. The company is far behind in advance orders for new model Fords and production capacity has not been reached since changing from the old model.

COPS TO MINGLE IN GOTHAM "WHOOPIE"

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—The shrill blasts of police whistles will have a prominent place in the uproar tonight when New York's old year out.

Gas to End War

A new gas which will make war international suicide, an acetylene compound, is being experimented with by Dr. Hilton Ira Jones, of Wilmette, Ill. At Chicago he has declared he believes the gas, which is highly explosive, nauseous and poisonous, will be a means of doing away with war.

BOLIVIANS ACCEPT PAN-AMERICAN PEACE PLAN WITH CHANGES

Modified Protocol Taken With Slight Changes

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 31.—The Bolivian government has accepted with slight modifications the protocol of the Pan-American arbitration and conciliation conference in connection with the solution of the recent clashes in the Chaco region, disputed between Paraguay and Bolivia, Bolivian minister to Argentina Pinto Escalier announced today.

The minister said his government informed him of the acceptance last night.

The protocol was forwarded to the Bolivian and Paraguayan governments after they had accepted the good offices of the conference now meeting at Washington. It provides for the method of approaching the dispute.

An official statement issued by the Paraguayan legation late last night reiterated the previous charges made by the legation at Washington that Bolivian troops reoccupied Fort Van Guardia subjugated to the acceptance by both countries of the conference's good offices.

A wholly unconfirmed dispatch to La Critica from its correspondent at Asuncion yesterday said messages from Cuzumba asserted that Bolivian military aviators dropped incendiary bombs Saturday night over Bahia Negra and that strong Bolivian detachments were seen near Fort Galpon. The correspondent said a clash in the Chaco district was imminent.

It was noteworthy, however, that no other correspondents in Asuncion sent similar reports.

FAMILY BIBLE USED IN COOPER CEREMONY

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 31.—A large family Bible which has been in the Cooper family for many years, will be used by the new governor when he takes the oath of office as Ohio's eighty-fourth chief executive here Jan. 14. Chief Justice Carrington T. Marshall will administer the oath.

The Rev. J. J. Castleberry, pastor of the Walnut Hills Christian Church which Cooper attends, has been obtained to deliver the invocation. The benediction will be pronounced by Dr. W. O. Thompson, president emeritus of Ohio State University.

An extensive military escort will accompany the gubernatorial party in the parade preceding the inauguration ceremony. Troops of national guardsmen from Cincinnati, Cooper's home town, will form the guard of honor.

Other out of town units, detachments from twenty Columbus companies, regular army and Ohio State University cadet corps will also be included.

'STUBBY' M'GOVERN, 'GUNNER' M'FADDEN KILLED BY STRANGER

Police Sergeant On Scene Arrests Lone Gunner; Killer Silent

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—Hugh "Stubby" McGovern, beer runner and former henchman of Al Capone, and William "Gunner" McFadden, 35, a pal of McGovern, were shot to death early today in the Granada Cafe, a night club.

George Mahoney was held in the shooting.

The two gangsters were dining and dancing in the night club with two other men and four women when a stranger approached their table, drew a pistol and started shooting.

McGovern drew his gun and leaped to the south side of the room. McFadden whipped out his automatic and ran to the north side of the dance floor.

As they ran the stranger continued firing and the two gangsters replied. Suddenly McGovern sank to the floor with a bullet through his heart. The stranger whirled and sent a bullet into McFadden's heart.

Police Sergeant Tim Sullivan, at the cigar counter when the shooting started, dashed through the panic stricken crowd to the dance floor. He found Mahoney standing among the deserted tables with a pistol in his hand.

Mahoney, who was not immediately identified as an enemy of McGovern or McFadden, offered no resistance and refused to answer questions.

There were 200 men and women in the cafe when the shooting occurred. They scattered in panic when the gun battle started.

McGovern at one time was the chief lieutenant of Al Capone, gangland overlord of Chicago.

McGovern was known here as a man who was not to be trifled with. He had the reputation of being "bad" and a number of killings have been traced to his activities, though none was laid directly to him. Several recent machine gunnings on the south side were attributed to efforts of his enemies to "get" McGovern.

McFadden was one of the lesser lights of gangland, but of late had risen to a position of importance as one of McGovern's lieutenants.

McGovern rose from "back of the yards" to a position of great prominence in gangland. Ralph Sheldon took him under his wing five years ago and for the next four years the two rarely were separated. McGovern had been arrested in connection with several brutal murders. Once he was accused of killing a negro deliberately "to see how he would die."

Gangsters told of how he would torture a victim and there were whispers that McGovern would kill for nothing more than the doubtful "thrill" of murder.

For four years he acted as Sheldon's chief bodyguard. Where Sheldon was found, there would be found McGovern, watching his chief.

There came a rift last spring. McGovern accused Sheldon of "shorting" him as much as a thousand dollars a week in the beer earnings from the south side which they divided.

McGovern once shot Sheldon four times. Sheldon went to New Mexico to recover his health and McGovern took over the south side beer industry. He met strong opposition, however, and his success was small.

Sheldon returned to Chicago a few months ago and it was predicted then that McGovern would "get him."

It was not known over what McGovern and Mahoney had agreed.

A Portrait in Exile

This is the latest portrait of Hermine, wife of the ex-Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany, in exile at Doorn, Holland.

Roy O. West (above), of Illinois, whose appointment as secretary of interior has stirred up a hornets' nest in the Senate. The appointee will be asked to explain his former legal connections with the insull interests of Chicago.

HOOVEN AND ALLISON OFFICES MERGED SOON AT FACTORIES

Within the next month, a consolidation of the downtown offices of The Hooven and Allison Co., manufacturers of rope and cordage, located in the Steele Bldg., Main and Detroit Sts., and the factory office of the three mills operated on Cincinnati Ave., will be effected, according to an announcement Monday by George Little, president, and W. Crawford Craig, general manager and treasurer of the company.

The company maintains general offices in Xenia. The principal offices in the Steele Bldg., owned by J. D. Steele, former president and general manager of the concern, will be moved to the Cincinnati Ave. plant.

The relocation is being made in the interest of greater economy and efficiency. The transfer is expected to take place sometime prior to February 1.

For many years the downtown offices of the firm have occupied a suite of nineteen rooms in the Steele Bldg., thirteen rooms being used on the second floor and six rooms on the third floor. Thirty-five officials and office employees of the firm will be transferred to the new location.

In order to accommodate the increased office force, considerable remodeling work at the Cincinnati Ave. plant was necessitated and is nearing completion. A one-story frame building, with dimensions of sixty by twenty-four feet, which has served as a grocery store for a number of years, has been moved over to the factory office structure, which is a two-story building occupying 2,200 square feet. The grocery has been discontinued. It was started more than ten years ago.

A concrete, fire-proof vault in which books and records of the company will be kept, is also being built as an addition to the office building. Its dimensions are thirty by eighteen feet.

The merged offices will occupy the present factory office building and the grocery building. No other exterior or interior remodeling work is being done except for repainting. The entire office equipment of the downtown offices will be removed to the new location and no new furnishings will be added.

Jeffries and Fudge, Xenia contracting firm, has had charge of the remodeling work.

The H. and A. Co., Xenia's largest industry, is one of the largest rope and twine factories in the world. The concern operates three mills on Cincinnati Ave., known as the New Mill, the Ohio Mill and the Xenia Mill. The company has branch offices at its factories at North Kansas City, Mo. and Covington, Ky., and branch sales offices in Minneapolis, Minn., Omaha, Neb., Kansas City, Mo., and Atlanta, Ga.

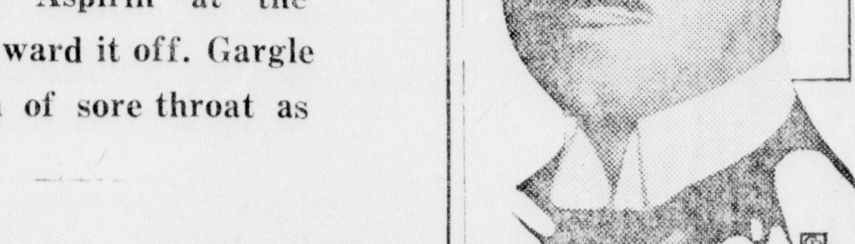

The industry was founded in 1869. There are six different types of cordage and few mills make more than one or two while the H. and A. Co. is known for its diversified range of products, making four different types.

BELL TELEPHONE TO CUT RATE SCHEDULE

Announcement was made Monday in New York by Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company that effective February there will be a reduction in day rates for long distance calls in the Bell system representing an annual saving to the public of more than $5,000,000.

The new schedule of rates will affect, according to E. F. Carter, president of The Ohio Bell Telephone Company, all inter-state calls to and from Ohio between points 130 to approximately 1500 miles apart. The reduction will cut from 5 cents to 25 cents from charges for station-to-station calls in these mileage ranges.

The new schedule of rates that goes into effect February 1 cuts from 5 cents to 25 cents from charges for station-to-station calls between points from 130 to approximately 1500 miles apart. Middle distance rates will enjoy reductions as high as 13 per cent. An equivalent rate reduction will be made for person-to-person service.

Evening and night rates will remain at their present level. For a call from New York to Cleveland the basic station-to-station day rate is reduced from $2.05 to $1.80. A New York-Chicago call will cost $3 instead of $3.25. A New York-Palm Beach call or one between Denver and San Francisco will cost $3.75 instead of $4.00. Separate rates for appointment and messenger service under the new schedule are eliminated, these services being offered after February 1 at regular person-to-person rates. The extra charges above person-to-person rates previously made for appointment and messenger calls are eliminated on February 1 for all long distance calls so that these calls will be charged in the future at person-to-person rates.

Xenia subscribers will also benefit by the reduction.

ABOARD U. S. S. UTAH, Dec. 31.—President-elect Herbert Hoover was at work today, mapping out the material which he wishes to place before President Coolidge when they confer in Washington.

In addition to the domestic political problems which Mr. Hoover plans to take up with the retiring president, he hopes to go into considerable detail on the results of his goodwill mission to South America with particular emphasis upon the economic aspects of the trip. The problem of establishing the best possible communications between the northern and southern continents was of particular interest to Mr. Hoover for he believes closer communications breed closer understanding and friendship.

The office, however, will not be open Monday night.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE COVENANT OF GOD—As for me, this is my covenant with them, saith the Lord; My Spirit that is upon thee, and my words which I have put in thy mouth, shall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy seed, nor out of the mouth of thy seed's seed, saith the Lord, from henceforth and for ever.—Isa. 59:21.

PREDICTIONS OF NATION'S COLLAPSE

Shifting moral standards, generated by American life of the last 25 years, with its prosperity and accompanying self-indulgence, are precipitating the nation into a decline which may become absolute "before the sands of the present century have run out."

Such is the conclusion reached by Percival White in an article in the North American Review based upon a mass of statistical material purporting to demonstrate the growth of crime and vice and the accepted practice of indulgences which a quarter of a century ago were considered highly immoral.

The rise in the number of juvenile delinquents and the spread of lawlessness among adults, the increase in arrests for drunkenness—statistics on these and other social phenomena are quoted by the author as evidence of the slackening grip of American morality. And that slackening is further demonstrated, he says, in the growing tide of self-indulgence, has multiplied traffic in luxuries and made the annual consumption of cigarettes total 100,000,000,000.

"The student of history will find nothing comparable to the swiftness with which we are rushing to our fate," says the author.

"What will that fate be? As its morals weaken a nation weakens, it loses its place in the sun, it is supplanted by other nations. In so far as statistics can show, the United States is just passing its zenith. If its present rate of change continues, the slump will be rapid."

Mr. White's view is perhaps entirely too pessimistic. While he may find plenty of evidence to back up his assertions, there is also much evidence to the contrary. The ideals and the standard of conduct of the leaders and those who constitute the "backbone" of every community are just as high or perhaps higher than ever before. There always has been a large class held down by low ideals, but is hardly possible that these people can drag an entire nation down into decay.

STRIKES BLOW AT MERGERS

A punishing blow to prospective industrial mergers which would reduce competition in any manufacturing field is seen in the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals upholding the Federal Trade Commission, which recently set aside the purchase of the W. H. McElwain company, shoe manufacturers, by the International Shoe company.

The commission brought action under the Clayton Act which prohibits such acquisitions when they "lessen competition, restrain commerce in any section or community, or tend to create a monopoly." The purchase was made on terms which sacrificed preferred stock held by the public and employees of the McElwain company to reimburse executives of the company, holders of common stock which has been wiped out by losses, so the court held.

Promoters of mergers have been growing bolder and bolder in approaching the deadlines established by the Clayton and Sherman acts. If this case is carried to the Supreme court, a year or more will probably elapse before anything happens. But certain it is that the next of the Circuit Court's opinion is not encouraging to the views held by some of the more enthusiastic mergerites.

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

SATURATION?

Let's not worry about the saturation point in business, whether we are producing motor cars or what not. Listen to Major Carson, of N. W. Ayer & Son, advertising people. He says:

"As long as men die and babies are born there will be an ever changing market. Six thousand new babies in the United States every day mean 25,000,000 new customers every ten years. There are about 1,000,000 marriages every year, meaning a new untouched market for homes and all their appurtenances.

"Changing styles are constantly creating new demands. The car you thought so wonderful will take a back seat for a new model in a new color next year. The same thing is true of sewing machines, lead pencils and vacuum cleaners. The American family is always ready to buy newer things."

KNOWING WHERE IT IS

Howard C. Dunn, of the United States bureau of commerce, tells store keepers some facts about their business. The facts come from analysis.

"One grocer," said Mr. Dunn, "carried forty-two kinds of tea, six of which made up half his total sales in tea."

"According to this grocer's trading area 43 per cent of his customers live within half a mile of his store and his purchases make up 80 per cent of his sales. Analysis of his deliveries showed the minimum use of a truck was to deliver two cakes of yeast to a customer living three miles away.

"Analysis of toilet-goods sales in a city drug store for six months showed 74 per cent of total sales made on 159 items of 474 carried.

"Idle merchandise stocks on the shelves of retailers constitute one of the outstanding wastes. Merchandise which sleeps on the shelves gradually accumulates costs, such as storage, interest, insurance, taxes, shrinkage, depreciation of obsolescence. Furthermore it ties up a retailer's capital and depreciates his credit."

Few who read this column are grocers, but the idea, the principle is sound. It is wise to know where the money comes from and where it goes. It is very wise to know where our time goes, what we are doing and why. The lack of analysis of our business and ourselves is one of the major reasons for failure.

The Diary

New Yorker

By WALTER WINCHELL

NEW YORK. — One of the shrewd lads has connected a scheme which does away with the expense of sending gifts, cards, and other Yuletide flim-doodle. He writes to friends: "Dear Pal: I have looked all over the city for something good enough to send you for the holidays, in vain. So I gave a charitable organization the money I would have spent on you. Instead."

Ten days later the same friends received letters (on his own specially prepared "Charity Group" stationery) which read: "We thank you so much for your kind and thoughtful contribution. Your $200 will keep many a child alive."

BY WAY OF REPORT

The local drama oracles are offering theories why the current theatrical season is slumping to a lower level than ever before. The World's Mr. Holmesdale argues that it is not because of the poor list of attractions, nor because there are too many theaters. It is the traffic situation. Playgoers are fed up, he says, with fighting their way to the playhouses or from them, and decide not to go at all.

Melba, mebbes. But the commotion pictures, it seems to us, are doing more to stifle the legit business than anything else. And a wag sums up the situation in these pert words:

"Reuben's restaurant, where the celebs go, has a slogan: 'From a sandwich to an institution.' So the show business probably will invent a slogan to read: 'From an institution to a sandwich!'"

INCIDENTALLY

There is some chatter about the excessive fees demanded by the ticket brokers for tickets to Ziegfeld's "Whoopie," a smash hit. They are asking for, and getting, $40 a pair. Pretty stiff prices, but the "inside" is that the specs are making the particular playgoer pay not only to see "Whoopie," but for the tickets the specs had "to eat" on the army of flops. One broker "ate" $185 worth of tickets last night to a local musical, by the way.

WOULD YOU BELIEVE IT?

An incredible story, but a fact, they say, was told yesterday. It appears that "Sunny," Dillingham's great hit, starring Marilyn Miller, which played to an average of $40,000 weekly for a year here, and clicked in the provinces, too, would cost the sponsor a $20,000 loss.

The terrific wages demanded by the musician and stage hand unions, overtime, etc., is reported to be the chief reason for the "awful conditions." And in five years some people believe there won't be anything but sound flickers. A musical hit, they think, such as "Whoopie," will cost $6,000 a seat in one night all over the country, instead of $6.50. And stage hands and musicians will have to seek other trades.

RACKET?

Robert Rubinstein reveals this stunt, which was employed by a pair of drunken collegiates who were out celebrating. One of them asked a Loe's waiter to ask the manager to pass the paper on the grounds that they were newspaper men. "Too crowded, some paper men," said the manager, affably. "Well, then," grumbled one of the stews, "now or else I'll give you a bad write-up in my sheet."

"Oh, yes," said the manager, sarcastically. "Well, here's a card, be sure and get my name right, and thus declaring himself, proceeded to write out his name on the back of the card."

A few minutes later the boys placed an "O. K." over the manager's name and then presented it to the doorman, who admitted them.

Kellygrams

I find myself more and more impressed with the willingness of the flourishing human race to pay the highest market price for discomfort. Look in any fashionable restaurant where victrolas are compelled to pay a so-called "cover charge" before they start to eat at all, and note how closely the tables are crowded together. If customers were seated comfortably would they feel like paying the same high prices?

I have noticed, too, that no matter how many cheap restaurants spring up alongside of a so-called exclusive hotel, that hotel meets such competition not by lowering prices in its own main dining room but by raising them. The manager knows that high prices will always attract a certain number who derive a pleasurable sense of importance and grandeur from paying them. I myself shall never forget to pay $12.50 for one little slice of honeydew melon!

Eye-glasses To Match Gowns Fashionable women of London have adopted the vogue of wearing eye-glasses with gowns. One bachelorette who favors tortoiseshell frames has them in dark and light, violet, green, pale blue, white and black, and each has a colored case to match.

ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Give influenza its due—it is a democratic malaise.

No class can claim to be any more subject to it or any freer from it than any other class. It is as liable to lay a multi-millionaire low as the garbage man—or vice versa.

So Dr. R. C. Williams of the U. S. public health service tells me.

Not that Dr. Williams made any attempt, as I have done, to give "flu" credit for its freedom from social prejudice. On the contrary he spoke of it very disparagingly.

But I know what makes the doc sore—science can't find the flu germ.

Until found, it cannot be effectively fought. Epidemic, it simply runs wild. The health service can only warn—it can promise nothing. Treatment amounts merely to a doctoring of symptoms. Their cause is pure guess work—until bacteriology spots that germ.

"A disease," grumbled Dr. Williams, "as old, some say as Hippocrates (B. C. 460-357)—and its germ a mystery yet!"

A scientist of the name of Pfeiffer once thought he had the culprit dead to rights. They even named it after him—and then the suspect proved an alibi. So medicine is groping in darkness again.

Dr. Williams was not averse to speculating concerning the unknown germ.

He surmises that it is of the plant family—not an animal. From the fact that it is so elusive, he conjectures that it is too small for the highest-powered microscope to see. Some equally minute germs are recognizable, after a fashion, in that they yield to the same treatment every time. Not so the flu germ—or, if there is a sure method of exterminating it, the doctors have not discovered it up to date.

Sometimes flu is very bad and at other times much worse.

Dr. Williams suggests that there may be variations in the germ.

"Just," he explained to me, "as all grass is grass—but there are different kinds of grass."

Is it possible that the germ of the common cold and the flu germ are members of the same family—that flu is a glorified cold?—like a field of rank timothy versus a nicely-kept lawn.

Dr. Williams was not prepared to say "No."

How could he? The common cold germ never has been caught and tagged, any more than the flu germ. Yeal as ordinary an affair as it is, that cold in your head is one of the medical puzzles of the ages.

The health service makes many recommendations in connection with the present flu epidemic—or pandemic—but they all simmer down to this—

For Pete's sake, don't catch it. If you do, go to bed and try to survive.

For the life of us, we don't know what the darn thing is. From all accounts this epidemic is quite mild—mild in quality, I mean—not in quantity. But may it not simply be getting up steam for a higher mortality rate?

Dr. Williams said he "hoped" not.

Pot Roast Browned Potatoes
Beet and Horseradish Relish
Brussels Sprouts Lettuce Salad
Bavarian Cream Coffee
Desserts and salads always fascinate me. I think people who don't eat desserts miss a great deal. Those that don't entail too much work, but have necessary food elements are the best. Try this one.

Today's Recipes.

Bavarian Cream—Soak one and one-half tablespoons of gelatin in a half cup of cold water for five minutes. Beat the yolks of two eggs, add one and one-half cups of scalded milk and three-fourths cup sugar, stirring slowly. Now add the gelatin and an eighth teaspoonful of salt. Place in the top of a double boiler and cook until thickened. Remove and cool. Add the beaten egg whites—two of them—and a cup of cream which has been whipped to stiffness, lastly adding a teaspoon of vanilla. Pour in a wet mold and chill. Serve with a chocolate sauce. This recipe will serve six.

Suggestion.

(When Water Is Scarce.)

If time and water are scarce, you can still enjoy a bath. Here's how: rub yourself briskly with a Turkish towel which has been soaked in hot soapy water. Rinse the towel in cold water and wring it out. Another rubdown, more briskly than before, then dry your body thoroughly with a fresh towel. This treatment takes only a few minutes and effectively combines cleansing with a tonic effect on the skin, nerves and mind. Because the first towel absorbs impurities from the skin, it must never be used again before washing.

A MATTER OF INCHES

When Bobbie was six, he was given a real watch, which, regardless of quality or accuracy, had a loud tick. Naturally, the little fellow was very proud, and he would stroll up and down the street, stopping every moment or two to draw the timepiece from his pocket and regard it gravely.

Every passerby smiled at Bobbie's performance, but the climax came when his little cousin, Betty, tripped along and asked him the time.

Bobby regarded his watch perplexedly for a moment, and then replied with dignity: "Two inches to four!"

Caricature Handkerchiefs

London women have a new fad. It is caricature handkerchiefs. They are large and somewhat crudely colored, and in one corner is a stenciled copy of a famous picture. Smart dressers are going farther, however, by having a sketch or caricature of themselves substituted for the picture.

BABY'S BIRTH CERTIFICATE IS VERY IMPORTANT MATTER

Answers to Mothers
God could not be everywhere; therefore he made mothers.

—Jewish Proverb.
The Importance of Registering Baby's Birth

Mrs. M.—I suggest you write a registered letter, receipt required, to the doctor who is so negligent of your baby's birth certificate and tell him that if he does not respond you are going to report it to the Board of Health. You must have your baby's birth certificate. There are many reasons why a child should have a birth registered and have a certificate of it. I'll give you the main ones:

1st.—For the Community:

If births are not registered, it exaggerates the death rate, gives your community a reputation for unhealthfulness, and destroys the comparability between communities.

2nd.—For the Individual:

Place of birth, under which can be proved the right of:

1. Citizenship
2. Passports
3. Residence
4. Legal Settlement
- Time of birth, which establishes legal evidence of:
1. School age
2. Work age
3. Age of Consent
4. Liability to Military Service
5. Right to Vote
6. Insurance Rates
7. Establish Citizenship

Parenthood, which establishes:

1. Legitimacy
2. Pension
3. Inheritance of Property
4. Insurance Settlement

5. Establish Citizenship
As to your other question: If a child has rupture, there is a bulging under the skin on the site of the rupture when the baby cries or exerts itself. The little buttony effect of the navel is not always a rupture. If it will take your baby to a specialist he will be able to tell you whether it is a rupture or not.

We have a list of modern books on the general care and feeding of children which you may have.

Massaging the Breasts
"I am the mother of two children. Since the birth of my children my breasts were flabby. I have massaged my chest with warm olive oil, and if I neglect doing this they are flabby again. I have heard the massaging the breasts is injurious. Is it?" Mrs. H.

Gentle massage of the breasts would not be injurious unless there happened to be a lump in them that had cancer possibilities. But I doubt if massage would have any effect upon keeping the breasts firm. Heavy massage of the breasts should never be practiced.

Flabby breasts are most often due to the weight of too much fat. The breasts should be supported by a properly fitting brassiere—not one that binds them down—during pregnancy and nursing, and, in fact, at all times.

If you need instructions on how to reduce your weight, ask for our pamphlet on the subject.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

NO MATTER WHAT MEN MAY SAY THEY PICK OLD FASHIONED GIRLS

It's all off, girls, you might as well put away the cigarettes and the hip flask, say no to the petters and cease trying to be sophisticated, for the boys don't really like it. Rub off the rouge and lipstick, speak only the purest English and get out the old knitting if you want a husband, for way down in the heart of the toughest specimen of masculinity is cherished the picture of the sweet, old-fashioned gal. For the man who has raved for years about the type of woman for him being the one who has "rubbed elbows with life," has fallen for a girl who, in his very own words, neither smokes nor drinks, and "never used a word of slang in her life."

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a girl in my late teens. Most all my girl friends are jealous of me, and, as far as I can see, they have no reason to be. Should I be glad that I can win other girls' fellows or not? I like to have girl friends, but it is always easier for me to get acquainted with boys than girls. There is a boy I have known for some time, but was with only once. So far I like him and think he likes me. Please tell me how I can win him?"

"WORRIED BOBBIE"

I think you'll get much more happiness and satisfaction out of life by playing fair with the girls and having them for friends than by specializing on the male sex. You are a bit proud of the fact that you attract men, are you not? That is all right. Every normal woman is like that, but remember that the same traits of good sportsmanship, which means fair play, and genuineness makes lasting friends of both men and women. And one who keeps on attracting men, she wants both. Try to be a good sport to your new boy friend and I think you'll have no difficulty in winning him.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I, too, am a 17-year-old girl suffering from unrequited love. The boy I love lives in the country about 30 miles from this town. I was my childhood sweetheart. I have loved him with all my heart for six years or more. He and I have always exchanged Christmas presents until about two years ago, he did not give me any. He never wrote to me more than three notes. I saw him last summer and he seemed delighted to see me. He goes with a girl who lives next door to him. No one whom I have asked has a good word to say of her. Should I give him a gift as we used to? Should I talk as though I'm having a gay time with the kids here, or just how could I make him really love me? I mean should I ask him to write and to come up to my graduation from high school, or wouldn't that be proper?"

"SEVENTEEN"

Dear, you might as well face the fact that the boy likes you as an old pal, but is not interested in you as a sweetheart. Just now. Don't join the chorus against the girl he likes. If you have occasion to speak of her, say nice things. Don't write especially to him to attend your graduation and don't give him a Christmas present. You may send his family an announcement of your graduation then, if he wants to, he will send you a gift. Try to be light hearted and happy and trust that you will either get over this or he will, in time, realize that you are the girl for him.

Mrs. H. I. T.: Don't you think the first wife is herself responsible for the letter you received? I do. She is probably jealous of you and the fact that she is not married again, has lost her position and feels herself slipping makes her think she can worry you, maybe, into doing something for her. I'd talk the matter over with your husband and, if he lets her keep on, maybe it would be best to have your husband's lawyer or a friend, see or write to her that she must stop. Don't worry about the matter. People do not believe a woman of the character—no one worth while—and she is really to be pitied, and a way, you know.

Pigeon Envis His Cousin

What there was in his snowstorm story to make the Pigeon sleepy it was hard to tell, but no sooner had he finished than he tucked his head under his wing. Peter poked him twice before he would look at him. When he did he was croaky.

"Can't you let a fellow rest?" asked he. "To begin with, I should think that you would have grown tired of hearing my voice by this time. I must have talked steadily for goodness knows how long. But if you are not weary that is no reason why you should not let me rest when I want to."

"My but I wish that I carried a tent like Cousin Crowned Pigeon does. This trying to make a shelter from the sun out of your feathers is not as easy as it looks."

"I have grown used to it, of course, but I think how much easier it would be if I did not have to twist my head around this way."

"Who is Cousin Crowned Pigeon?" asked the boy. "If you are really tired and want to go to sleep so badly, I promise you or my father that I will not speak to you again. In fact I will run away and leave you to doze here as long as you like if only you will tell me how any bird can carry a tent about with him."

Pigeon chuckled sleepily. "Cousin Crowned Pigeon doesn't find it hard," said he. "You see that Cousin of mine has a lot of things to cook eggs, so I say. So he suns and shades himself at the same time."

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE COVENANT OF GOD—As for me, this is my covenant with them, saith the Lord; My Spirit that is upon thee, and my words which I have put in thy mouth, shall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy seed, nor out of the mouth of thy seed's seed, saith the Lord, from henceforth and for ever.—Isa. 59:21.

PREDICTIONS OF NATION'S COLLAPSE

Shifting moral standards, generated by American life of the last 25 years, with its prosperity and accompanying self-indulgence, are precipitating the nation into a decline which may become absolute "before the sands of the present century have run out."

Such is the conclusion reached by Percival White in an article in the North American Review based upon a mass of statistical material purporting to demonstrate the growth of crime and vice and the accepted practice of indulgences which a quarter of a century ago were considered highly immoral.

The rise in the number of juvenile delinquents and the spread of lawlessness among adults, the increase in arrests for drunkenness—statistics on these and other social phenomena are quoted by the author as evidence of the slackening grip of American morality. And that slackening is further demonstrated, he says, in the growing tide of self-indulgence, has multiplied traffic in luxuries and made the annual consumption of cigarettes total 100,000,000,000.

"The student of history will find nothing comparable to the swiftness with which we are rushing to our fate," says the author.

"What will that fate be? As its morals weaken a nation weakens, it loses its place in the sun, it is supplanted by other nations. In so far as statistics can show, the United States is just passing its zenith. If its present rate of change continues, the slump will be rapid."

Mr. White's view is perhaps entirely too pessimistic. While he may find plenty of evidence to back up his assertions, there is also much evidence to the contrary. The ideals and the standard of conduct of the leaders and those who constitute the "backbone" of every community are just as high or perhaps higher than ever before. There always has been a large class held down by low ideals, but is hardly possible that these people can drag an entire nation down into decay.

STRIKES BLOW AT MERGERS

A punishing blow to prospective industrial mergers which would reduce competition in any manufacturing field is seen in the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals upholding the Federal Trade Commission, which recently set aside the purchase of the W. H. McElwain company, shoe manufacturers, by the International Shoe company.

The commission brought action under the Clayton Act which prohibits such acquisitions when they "lessen competition, restrain commerce in any section or community, or tend to create a monopoly." The purchase was made on terms which sacrificed preferred stock held by the public and employees of the McElwain company to reimburse executives of the company, holders of common stock which has been wiped out by losses, so the court held.

Promoters of mergers have been growing bolder and bolder in approaching the deadlines established by the Clayton and Sherman acts. If this case is carried to the Supreme court, a year or more will probably elapse before anything happens. But certain it is that the next of the Circuit Court's opinion is not encouraging to the views held by some of the more enthusiastic mergerites.

SATURATION?

Let's not worry about the saturation point in business, whether we are producing motor cars or what not. Listen to Major Carson, of N. W. Ayer & Son, advertising people. He says:

"As long as men die and babies are born there will be an ever changing market. Six thousand new babies in the United States every day mean 25,000,000 new customers every ten years. There are about 1,000,000 marriages every year, meaning a new untouched market for homes and all their appurtenances."

"Changing styles are constantly creating new demands. The car you thought so wonderful will take a back seat for a new model in a new color next year. The same thing is true of sewing machines, lead pencils and vacuum cleaners. The American family is always ready to buy newer things."

For Pete's sake, don't catch it. If you do, go to bed and try to survive.

For the life of us, we don't know what the darn thing is. From all accounts this epidemic is quite mild—mild in quality, I mean—not in quantity. But may it not simply be getting up steam for a higher mortality rate.

Dr. Williams said he "hoped" not.

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

BEAUTY'S NEW YEAR RESOLUTIONS

Today's resolutions are health resolutions. The first has to do with proper breathing. Most of us, I think, forget that we have lungs. We are either too cold in the winter time to keep the windows open as they should be, or too hot in the summer time to think very much about sitting and standing in a proper position so that the lungs have a chance to expand and the life-giving air has the opportunity to get away down deep into them.

On the matter of correct breathing, many, many other things hang, or perhaps it would be more correct to say that correct breathing depends upon good habits of posture.

A good circulation of air means a good circulation of blood. It means better nerves, better energy and better health, so when you resolve, as I want you to, to take at least ten deep breaths every day, filling your lungs to the very bottom, you are forming a resolution that is going to mean a great deal to your health.

Next in importance in the health resolutions has to do with drinking sufficient water. I do not believe there is one woman in five hundred who drinks two quarts of water every day. And by exactly the same token, I do not believe that 499 women realize the physical condition they can attain if they develop the proper health habits. Your system requires water. Not only is water important to replace certain elements in the blood, but it also serves to keep the internal organs clean and correctly functioning.

As a last resolution today, let me suggest to you the importance of keeping a check-up on the internal cleanliness of the system. Adding to your breakfast menu prunes, that old faithful of fruits, apples, oranges, grapefruit, apricots, dates, figs, etc., will help to assure you of the condition of your system. Fruit three times a day is none too much for good health.

TRY IT!

At the rodeo an agile cowgirl rode beneath the horse, on the horse's neck and almost on his tail.

One of the party remarked: "That's nothing. I did all of that the first time I ever rode a horse."

RETURN TRIP

The late Booker T. Washington used to tell a story of his meeting a colored woman and asking: "Well, Miranda, where are you going?" "Ise goin' home," she replied. "Ise goin' home," he replied, "Ise been where Ise goin'."

Brussels Sprouts Lettuce Salad
Bavarian Cream Coffee
Desserts and salads always fascinate me. I think people who don't eat desserts miss a great deal. Those that don't entail too much work, but have necessary food elements are the best. Try this one.

Today's Recipes.

Bavarian Cream—Soak one and one-half tablespoons of gelatine in a half cup of cold water for five minutes. Beat the yolks of two eggs, add one and one-half cups of scalded milk and three-fourths cup sugar, stirring slowly. Now add the gelatine and an eighth teaspoonful of salt. Place in the top of a double boiler and cook until thickened. Remove and cool. Add the beaten egg whites—two of them—and a cup of cream which has been whipped to stiffness, lastly adding a teaspoon of vanilla. Pour in wet molds and chill. Serve with a chocolate sauce. This recipe will serve six.

Suggestion.

(When Water is Scarce.)

If time and water are scarce, you can still enjoy a bath. Here's how: rub yourself briskly with a Turkish towel which has been soaked in hot soapy water. Rinse the towel in cold water and wring it out. Another rubdown, more briskly than before, then dry your body thoroughly with a fresh towel. This treatment takes only a few minutes and effectively combines cleansing with a tonic effect on the skin, nerves and mind. Because the first towel absorbs impurities from the skin, it must never be used again before washing.

A MATTER OF INCHES

When Bobbie was six, he was given a real watch, which, regardless of quality or accuracy, had a loud tick. Naturally, the little fellow was very proud, and he would stroll up and down the street, stopping every moment or two to draw the timepiece from his pocket and regard it gravely. Every passerby smiled at Bobbie's performance, but the climax came when his little cousin, Betty, tripped along and asked him the time.

Bobbie regarded his watch perplexedly for a moment, and then replied with dignity: "Two inches to four!"

Caricature Handkerchiefs

London women have a new fad. It is caricature handkerchiefs. They are large and somewhat crudely colored, and in one corner is a stenciled copy of a famous picture. Smart dressers are going farther, however, by having a sketch or caricature of themselves substituted for the picture.

Old Russian Law Killed

By the passing of a new law the state assembly of Estonia has just relieved the peasants of the hardships of an old Russian law. The law compelled them to maintain given portions of the roads in their district. Increased motor traffic brought demands with which the peasants were unable to cope.

BABY'S BIRTH CERTIFICATE IS VERY IMPORTANT MATTER

Answers to Mothers
God could not be everywhere; therefore he made mothers.

The Importance of Registering Baby's Birth

Mrs. M.—I suggest you write a registered letter, receipt required, to the doctor who is so negligent of your baby's birth certificate and tell him that if he does not respond you are going to report it to the Board of Health. You must have your baby's birth certificate. There are many reasons why a child should have a birth registered and have a certificate of it. I'll give you the main ones:

1st.—For the Community: If births are not registered, it exaggerates the death rate, gives your community a reputation for unhealthfulness, and destroys the comparability between communities.

2nd.—For the Individual: Place of birth, under which can be proved the right of:

1. Citizenship or not?
2. Passports
3. Residence
4. Legal Settlement
5. Time of birth, which establishes legal evidence of:
6. School age
7. Work age
8. Age of Consent
9. Liability to Military Service
10. Right to Vote
11. Insurance Rates
12. Establish Citizenship
13. Parenthood, which establishes:
14. Legitimacy
15. Pension
16. Inheritance of Property
17. Insurance Settlement

5. Establish Citizenship
As to your other question: If a child has rupture, there is a bulging under the skin on the site of the rupture when the baby cries or exerts itself. The little buttony effect of the navel is not always a rupture. If you will take your baby to a specialist he will be able to tell you whether it is a rupture or not.

We have a list of modern books on the general care and feeding of children which you may have.

Massaging the Breasts
"I am the mother of two children. Since the birth of my first child my breasts were flabby. I have massaged my chest with warm olive oil, and if I neglect doing this they are flabby again. I have heard that massaging the breasts is injurious. Is it?" Mrs. H.

Gentle massage of the breasts would not be injurious unless there happened to be a lump in them that had cancer possibilities. But I doubt if massage would have any effect upon keeping the breasts firm. Heavy massage of the breasts should never be practiced.

Flabby breasts are most often due to the weight of too much fat. The breasts should be supported by a properly fitting brassiere—not one that binds them down—during pregnancy and nursing, and in fact, at all times. If you need instructions on how to reduce your weight, ask for our pamphlet on the subject.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

NO MATTER WHAT MEN MAY SAY THEY PICK OLD FASHIONED GIRLS

It's all off, girls. You might as well put away the cigarettes and the lip stick, and no to the petters and cease trying to be sophisticated, for the boys don't really like it. Rub off the rouge and lipstick, speak only the purest English and get out the old knitting if you want a husband, for way down in the heart of the toughest specimen of masculinity is cherished the picture of the sweet, old-fashioned gal. For the man who has raved for years about the type of woman for him being the one who has "rubbed elbows with life," has fallen for a girl who, in his very own words, neither smokes nor drinks, and "never used a word of slang in her life."

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a girl in my late teens. Most all my girl friends are jealous of me, and as far as I can see, they have no reason to be. Should I be glad that I can win other girls' fellows or not? I like to have girl friends, but it is always easier for me to get acquainted with boys than girls. There is a boy I have known for some time, but was with only once. So far I like him and think he likes me. Please tell me how I can win him?"

"WORRIED BOBBIE."
I think you'll get much more happiness and satisfaction out of life by playing fair with the girls and having them for friends than by specializing on the male sex. You are a bit proud of the fact that you attract men, are you not? That is all right. Every normal woman is like that, but remember that the same traits of good sportsmanship, which means fair play, and genuineness makes lasting friends of both men and women. And one wants both. Try to be a good sport not to your new boy friend and I think you'll have no difficulty in winning him.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I, too, am a 17-year-old girl suffering from unrequited love. The boy I love lives in the country about 30 miles from this town. He was my childhood sweetheart. I have loved him with all my heart for six years or more. He and I have always exchanged Christmas presents until about two years ago, he did not give me any. He never wrote to me more than three notes. I saw him last summer, and he seemed delighted to see me. He goes with a girl who lives next door to him. No one whom I have asked has a good word to say of her. Should I give him a gift as we used to? Should I talk as though I'm having a gay time with the kids here, or just how could I make him really love me? I mean should I ask him to write and to come up for my graduation from high school, or wouldn't that be wrong?"

"SEVENTEEN."
Dear, you might as well face the fact that the boy likes you as an old pal, but is not interested in you as a sweetheart just now. Don't join the chorus against the girl he likes. If you have occasion to speak of her, say nice things. Don't write especially to him to attend your graduation and don't give him a Christmas present. You may send his family an announcement of your graduation then, if he wants to, he will send you a gift. Try to be high hearted and happy and trust that you will either get over this or he will, in time, realize that you are the girl for him.

Mrs. H. I. T.: Don't you think the first wife is herself responsible for the letters you receive? I do. She is probably jealous of you and the fact that she is not married again, has lost her position and feels herself slipping makes her think she can worry you, maybe, into doing something for her. I'd talk the matter over with your husband and, if the letters keep on, maybe it would be best to have your husband's lawyer or a friend, see or write to her that she must stop. Don't worry about the matter. People do not believe a woman of that character—no one worth while—and she is really to be pitied, in a way, you know.

Pigeon Envis His Cousin

What there was in his snow-storm story to make the Pigeon sleepy it was hard to tell, but no sooner had he finished than he tucked his head under his wing. Peter poked him twice before he would look at him. When he did he was cross.

"Can't you let a fellow rest Boy?" asked he. "To begin with, I should think that you would have grown tired of hearing my voice by this time. I must have talked steadily for goodness knows how long. But if you are not weary, that is no reason why you should not let me rest when I want to."

"My but I wish that I carried a tent like Cousin Crowned Pigeon does. This trying to make a shelter from the sun out of your feathers is not as easy as it looks. I have grown used to it, of course, but I think how much easier it would be if I did not have to twist my head around this way."

easy to find a roosting place in the middle of the day, just as every hour when one wishes it the most.

"The trees are all full, and the bird who wants the best branch has to get there first. But Cousin Pigeon does not worry about such things."

"I tried to struggle out of his grasp."

CENTRAL BUCCA NEERS TO MEET COLUMBUS EAST HERE SATURDAY

WEEK OF PRAYER OPENS SUNDAY, DR. CROWE HERE MONDAY

The fine attendance at the initial service of the Week of Prayer, Sunday evening at the Presbyterian Church, was very gratifying to the Ministerial Association and to those whose auspices it is being projected. In the absence of Dr. Crowe, the speaker engaged for the week, the message was brought by Dr. Carl H. White, pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Yellow Springs. The sermon was based upon the subject "Pressing On," taken from the Scripture passage Philippians 3:13, 14, "Brethren I count not myself to have apprehended; but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

The speaker said, "As we are leaving the old year and launching into the new one of the greatest assets for success was the possession of a good forgetter." "Paul," the speaker said, "was no quitter but the power to persevere lay in the fact that he could forget the discouragements, persecutions, privations, and all the things which he had to fight with the beasts at Ephesus and press on to new fields that he may win the prize of God in Christ Jesus."

Dr. White said a consuming passion for the cause of Christ would cause us to forget too, it will cause us to forget our moods, our selfishness, and our own interests and press on to the higher things of life. "Paul judged by present-day standards would have been a complete failure," he said. "He left every church in which he ever preached divided, he was one of the greatest of heretics, trampling on all the orthodoxy of his day, he never held a large church and never stayed over three years at any one place."

Paul's passion for the cause of Christ caused him to forget physical handicaps and whatever the thorn in the flesh might have been he pressed on because he loved his mission.

His ministry was one of reconciliation, of redemption, one of salvation and Paul felt the seriousness of his call to preach this Gospel and knowing it was God's mission he pressed on and fainting not, knowing he would be doing what God wanted done. John Mark left Paul when the way grew hard and Demas had forsaken him having loved this present world, but Paul having begun pressed on. It was the admonition of the speaker that we, as we enter the new year forget the past and press on.

The Rev. James P. Lytle led in the invocation the Rev. H. B. McElree offered prayer, the Rev. Russell Burkett read the Scripture of the evening and the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. J. R. Lunsford. The Rev. W. H. Tilford had charge of the services.

Dr. William Crowe, of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, St. Louis, Mo., will arrive in Xenia Monday evening to conduct the second service of the Week of Prayer.

His subject for this evening will be "Christian Social Consciousness." Dr. Crowe will start speaking each evening about 8:00 o'clock, the services opening at 7:30 p. m. with a preliminary worship program.

The topics for the remainder of the week are as follows: Tuesday, January 1—"Being a Christian—The Supreme Achievement."

Wednesday, January 2—"afternoon 3:00 o'clock—'Godliness Versus Religion'; evening at 7:30—"Deliverance—The Major Theme of Faith."

Thursday, January 3—"afternoon—'Honest Testimony'; evening—"The Waterloo of Sin."

Friday, January 4—"afternoon—"Songs of the Redeemed"; evening—"The Interpreters House."

Dr. Crowe will be here for these eight addresses, at the Presbyterian Church. Several other bodies will hear him including the Rotary Club and Central High School. The public is invited to all the meetings.

the season at Central gymnasium. Honors are even between Xenia and Columbus East in the brief basketball rivalry between the two schools, which began in the 1921-22 season. The schools will be renewing athletic relations after a lapse of seven seasons.

East subjected Xenia to its worst defeat in history in 1922-23, defeating the Blue and White quintet 18 to 2. However, the preceding season, the Blues beat Columbus East 25 to 20.

The Buccaneers have not been idle during the Christmas vacation period. The squad has held frequent practice workouts in order to retain the polish acquired in the first two games, both of which resulted in victories.

Xenia has shown consistent form, at least in the matter of scores of its two games, defeating Leesburg 15 to 13 and Wilmington, 18 to 13. With apparently a strong defense, Coach Walter L. "Pinky" Wilson will labor this week to perfect a more powerful offense.

HORACE D. BUCKLES DIES AT JAMESTOWN HOME ON MONDAY

Prevent Flu—Check Colds Immediately

FAMILIES IN XENIA URGED TO BE CAREFUL

While grip and influenza are so prevalent, local people are urged to use this modern way of checking little colds before they become big.

Have a jar of Vicks VapoRub on hand ready for instant use at the first sign of every cold. When rubbed on throat and chest, or snuffed up the nose, Vicks releases its ingredients in the form of medicated vapors which are breathed in direct to the infected parts.

In addition, Vicks acts through the skin like a poultice, "drawing out" all tightness and pain, loosening the phlegm, clearing the head, and easing the difficult breathing.

To prevent colds from lowering vitality and thus paving the way for flu and pneumonia, they should be treated direct and instantly—as you would an infected finger.

CROWE HERE MONDAY

The fine attendance at the initial service of the Week of Prayer, Sunday evening at the Presbyterian Church, was very gratifying to the Ministerial Association under whose auspices it is being projected. In the absence of Dr. Crowe, the speaker engaged for the week, the message was brought by Dr. Carl H. White, pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Yellow Springs. The sermon was based upon the subject "Pressing On," taken from the Scripture passage Philippians 3:13,14, "Brethren I count not myself to have apprehended; but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

The speaker said, "As we are leaving the old year and launching into the new one of the greatest assets for success was the possession of a good forgetter." "Paul," the speaker said, "was no quitter but the power to persevere lay in the fact that he could forget the discouragements, persecutions, privations, and how he fought with the beasts at Ephesus and press on to new fields that he may in the prize of God in Christ Jesus."

Dr. White said a consuming passion for the cause of Christ would cause us to forget too, it will cause us to forget our moods, our selfishness, and our own interests and press on to the higher things of life. "Paul judged by present day standards would have been a complete failure," he said. "He left every church in which he ever preached divided, he was one of the greatest of heretics, trampling on all the orthodox of his day, he never held a large church and never stayed over three years at any one place."

Paul's passion for the cause of Christ caused him to forget physical handicaps and whatever the thorn in the flesh might have been he pressed on because he loved his mission.

His ministry was one of reconciliation, of redemption, one of salvation, and Paul felt the seriousness of his duty to preach this Gospel and knowing it was God's mission he pressed on and fainting not, knowing he would be a certain failure unless he was doing what God wanted done. John Mark left Paul when the way grew hard and Demas had forsaken him having loved this present world, but Paul having begun pressed on. It was the admonition of the speaker that we, as we enter the new year forget the past and press on.

The Rev. James P. Lytle led in the invocation the Rev. H. B. McElree offered prayer, the Rev. Russell Burkett read the Scripture of the evening and the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. J. R. Lunsford. The Rev. W. H. Tilford had charge of the services.

Dr. William Crowe, of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, St. Louis, Mo., will arrive in Xenia Monday evening to conduct the second service of the Week of Prayer.

His subject for this evening will be "Christian Social Consciousness." Dr. Crowe will start speaking each evening about 8:00 o'clock, the services opening at 7:30 p. m. with a preliminary worship program.

The topics for the remainder of the week are as follows:

Tuesday, January 1—"Being a Christian—The Supreme Achievement."

Wednesday, January 2—"Afternoon 3:00 o'clock—'Godliness Versus Religion'; evening at 7:30—"Deliverance—The Major Theme of Faith."

Thursday, January 3—"afternoon—'Honest Testimony'; evening—"The Waterloo of Sin."

Friday, January 4—"afternoon—"Songs of the Redeemed"; evening—"The Interpreters House."

Dr. Crowe will be here for these eight addresses, at the Presbyterian Church. Several other bodies will hear him including the Rotary Club and Central High School. The public is invited to all the meetings.

SEEK MISSING GIRL
CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 31.—Search for Miss Elizabeth Bostworth, 21, daughter of F. C. Bostworth, Cleveland attorney, was to be carried out by the surface of Lake Erie today by an airplane.

The young woman, a member of the 1929 class of the college for women, Western Reserve University, disappeared from the home of her aunt, Friday night.

She is believed to have been clad only in a suit of pajamas, a pair of shoes and a brown overcoat.

A trained police dog, given the scent of her blouse, was followed a trail to the lake shore, not far from her aunt's home.

Coast guard and members of the Lakewood police department covered the shore line Sunday without finding any trace of the girl.

Parents of the girl said she suffered a breakdown in October, but was recovering.

DOROTHY MACKAYE FREED FROM PRISON

SAN QUENTIN State Prison, Calif., Dec. 31.—Dorothy Mackaye, stage actress serving a one-year term for compounding a felony after her husband, Ray Raymond, had been killed in a fist fight with Paul Kelly will walk out of the prison gates New Year's morning a free woman.

The state board of prison directors yesterday fixed the penalty for Miss Mackaye's crime at one year, but a provision for first offenders automatically reduced this to ten months. The actress was committed on March 1 and her term expires today.

It is believed Miss Mackaye will return to the stage. She was a member of the cast of a Christmas play given here last week.

Kelly, who accompanied her to prison, will not leave with her. His term recently was set at five years.

Prevent Flu—
Check Colds
Immediately

FAMILIES IN XENIA URGED TO BE CAREFUL

While grip and influenza are so prevalent, local people are urged to use this modern way of checking little colds before they become big.

Have a jar of Vicks VapoRub on hand ready for instant use at the first sign of every cold. When rubbed on throat and chest, or snuffed up the nose, Vicks releases its ingredients in the form of medicated vapors which are breathed in direct to the infected parts.

In addition, Vicks acts through the skin like a poultice, "drawing out" all tightness and pain, loosening the phlegm, clearing the head, and easing the difficult breathing.

To prevent colds from lowering vitality and thus paving the way for flu and pneumonia, they should be treated direct and instantly—as you would an infected finger.

HUCKSTERS PASS AS AUTO HAS REPLACED HORSE ON HIGHWAYS

MORRISTOWN, O., Dec. 31.—One of the most prosperous trades in this part of the country—the huckster business—for which this community was famous for decades, has gone the way of its instruments of business, the horse and wagon, and passed into obscurity with the end of 1928.

Improved transportation by automobile is believed responsible. The last horse, abandoned only recently. So far as is known he is the last in the business in which more than a score of local residents were engaged at times, covering large portions of Belmont, Harrison and Guernsey counties.

The industry was in its prime thirty years ago. Wagons and teams were kept busy traveling from one farm to another buying up butter, eggs and produce which were taken to nearby cities and then disposed of to other dealers who in turn offered them to their patrons. Many of the wagons carried groceries which the owners traded for farm produce, thus providing traveling store service to the farm wives.

A team system whereby one of the operators would make a trip to the selling terminals while the other toured the farm district buying up produce, was used by most of the hucksters.

Twice a week the accumulation of farm produce was taken to market in the city, usually on Tuesdays and Thursdays. On those mornings, regardless of weather, a caravan of from four to ten wagons started the highways to the city. As the caravan progressed in the darkness some began the drives early as 2 a. m.—the party was joined along the route by other wagons until it resembled a wagon train of the western pioneer days. Arriving at their destination the

READ THIS FIRST:

Through the loom of every marriage, there run many threads, gay and dark, and it depends upon the dexterity of the weavers, whether the pattern will be bright and cheerful or dark and threatening. When Byrd married Larry Browning, she had only known the sheltered life of a small town, but moving to Cleveland, she was soon hurled into the modern vortex that sucks at the youth of the city, whirling them about in the mad waters of extravagance, get-rich-quick business and soft living.

From the very beginning, Byrd began to struggle against the influences that were threatening her handsome, magnetic, speed-loving husband, influences which threatened to undermine his reputation and career, her own ambitions for a home and children and, lastly, the very foundations of their marriage.

For the elements that were combining against Byrd's happiness were many: Larry's partnership with unscrupulous Jack Duncan in a speculative scheme, floating the stock of the Builders' Supply company; Larry's continual loans from Byrd's father, who was president of a bank; the succession of parties with a fast moving crowd, consisting of Tiny and Fred Oberman, Jack and Margy Duncan, Chet Everson and India Campbell, a former sweetheart of Larry's; Larry's refusal to break off his friendship with India, his growing extravagance; the increasing difference over bills, and economies which couldn't pay for the week's grocery bill but could afford a case of Scotch; and finally, the further rupture caused by Pat's visit, Byrd's young sister, who should have had a firm and disciplinary hand.

Unsuccessful in her many attempts to refine and educate Pat, who had become boisterous and a little wild, Byrd appealed to Larry; but Larry, more amused than worried, encouraged her waywardness by loaning her money and taking her to night clubs.

During Larry's absence on Builders' Supply matters, which had met with some success, Byrd visited her father and mother at Jacksonville to discuss with her father Larry's decision to invest five thousand dollars in a real estate company which Jack Duncan had just organized, and to borrow the money from Mr. Hamilton. On the condition that Byrd invest part of the money, in a home and "a baby or two," Mr. Hamilton loaned her six thousand dollars. Byrd agreed to disengage Larry from the second venture, sell out his Builders' Supply Company interests, and go into business for himself.

Byrd took immediate steps to purchase a house as soon as she returned to Cleveland, galvanizing herself against all of Larry's objections. She had to clean up the apartment, which was very messy from a party that Pat and India had dropped in, bursting with the latest scandal, Jack Duncan had left his wife and children and was living at his club, and his wife, Margy, was about to file divorce proceedings and hinted that a woman whom they all knew would be involved.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXVI

"I think it's India!" stated Tiny. "I've seen them hunching together."

Byrd's legs and arms seemed to re-assemble again, and she felt that she was once more whole. It was ridiculous to imagine that her name would be linked with Jack's just because he had a vanity case that belonged to her and his wife had found it.

"Larry says he's at a night club every night of his life with the different girls. A night club's just a health resort to him," laughed Byrd, again at ease. But she did have a fright!

It was nearly six o'clock and Byrd was wondering what she and Pat would have for supper. Likely as not, Pat wouldn't be there for supper.

And just then Pat whisked in like a sharp blast. She affected the senses like a sudden dash of red pepper.

Byrd took one horrified look at a vague memory of her high school days glimmered through her mind, when, in a zoology class, they discussed "reversion to type." And Pat had seized her opportunity, and had "reverted." She made Byrd think of that sudden, final crash of discord that a jazz orchestra flings out at the end of each dance.

For Pat was dressed in an entire new outfit, blatant, colorful, jazzy, and made up within an inch of her life. She looked as if she might have been Tiny's daughter.

Pat gave them a breezy greeting, explaining that she and Tiny

"Heaven help the poor working girl," said Pat.

and India had hunched together, during Byrd's absence.

But Byrd continued to look at Pat as if she couldn't believe her eyes.

"Where have you been all day, and where did you get all that face, dress, coat and hat?" inquired Byrd, frowningly. "You look as if you're literally staggering under the influence of cosmetics and—India!"

"Heaven help the poor working girl on a night like this!" said Pat, holding her hands out theatrically. "No motor to guide her."

"Cut it!" said Byrd, angrily. "I want to know what you've been doing while I was away, and where you got those clothes?"

"As Sir Walter Raleigh said to Queen Elizabeth, as she spread out his cloak, 'Step on it, kid!' I'll put my foot on the gas and confess all!"

As she talked, Pat took off her green coat and orange felt and settled herself comfortably on the day-bed, with a cigarette dangling between her listless fingers.

Tiny suddenly put on her hat and gloves. She hated family squabbles, she chirped. "How about a quiet little party over at our house to-morrow night?"

"Fine!" applauded Pat, but as Byrd looked up quickly, she added, "Or aren't I invited?"

"Of course, you are! I'm giving the party for you, child," Tiny added.

After Tiny had left, Pat ran down to the delicatessen and got some sliced ham and potato salad for their supper. Byrd maintained a terrible silence while they were getting it ready.

"Well, I got awfully tired sitting around here all day, and at India's suggestion, I went down to see the employment manager of Simpson and Taylor."

"Drugs and Toilet Goods" because he told me my complexion was a good ad for their line," Pat began, as if their conversation hadn't been interrupted.

"But what about business school?" interrupted Byrd, sharply. "Father'll be frightfully disappointed. Of course I told him you had already started in."

"Really?" ejaculated Byrd. "Uh-huh!" nodded Pat, with her mouth full of potato salad.

While they were washing the dishes, Byrd decided to tell Pat about the house, getting her cooperation might help the situation when Larry stepped into the picture.

Byrd explained that she had telephoned several real estate companies, and that she would look at houses and even try to decide on one before Larry came home.

For Larry had objections to a house. So many men had "Men were at home so little that it didn't really matter to them, but a home was a woman's club. It was the outward expression of all her dreams and ambitions."

"Well, I'd tell any man who wanted to coo me up in a hot box like this to go jump in the lake!" said Pat, triumphantly. "But I don't think Larry will object, now that he's making enough money to pay for it."

The telephone rang, and the girl at the switchboard downstairs said that Mr. Polk was calling.

"Tell him to come right up," said Byrd, hastily removing her apron. Lines of worry appeared and disappeared as she tried to guess what brought Progress Polk to see them.

Progress Polk reminded Byrd of her father, not in appearance, but in the kindly understanding that shone from his deep-set grey eyes. He was a short, wiry man that seemed oddly pointed, for all his movements had a jerky deliberation. His bristling grey eyebrows added to the alertness of his eyes.

"Your father reminded me in a letter that I hadn't been looking after you properly. What mischief have you two been up to lately?" he laughed.

"Ask Byrd," said Pat mischievously. It seemed hotter tonight in the apartment than out doors.

"That's the trouble with apartments," said Byrd, apologetically. "They board the heat like fireless cookers."

buy a house," Mr. Polk said, "and suggested I might be of some help."

Byrd actually jumped out of her chair and gave a funny, little, hysterical laugh.

"And do you sell houses?" asked Byrd, clapping her hands together like a little girl, her relief was so great.

"Our real estate department does," he smiled. "You see, banks often have to take over properties to protect their mortgages. This house just came in yesterday, and it's a pippin!"

"Why, I just called up six real estate companies this morning!" remarked Byrd. "How much nicer to buy it from you!"

"And at a price you couldn't get from anybody else!" Mr. Polk reminded her.

So it was arranged that Byrd drive out with Mr. Polk the next day and look at it.

"After we're settled," remarked Byrd, as he was leaving, "I may take that job you once offered me. I'd like to think I'm helping to pay for the house."

"That promise still holds," laughed Mr. Polk. "We'll make you twenty-third vice president."

"I accept it right now!" laughed Byrd.

It was only a joke, for Byrd hadn't the slightest presentiment that within a few weeks she would be working for Progress Polk, and her little house a shattered dream.

HUCKSTERS PASS AS AUTO HAS REPLACED HORSE ON HIGHWAYS

MORRISTOWN, O., Dec. 31.—One of the most prosperous trades in this part of the country—the huckster business—for which this community was famous for decades, has gone the way of its instruments of business, the horse and wagon, and passed into obscurity with the end of 1928.

Improved transportation by automobile is believed responsible.

The last route, operated by Orville Lynn was abandoned only recently. So far as is known he is the last in the business in which more than a score of local residents were engaged at times, covering large portions of Belmont, Harrison and Guernsey counties.

The industry was in its prime thirty years ago. Wagons and teams were kept busy traveling from one farm to another buying up butter, eggs and produce which were taken to nearby cities and there disposed of to other dealers who in turn offered them to their patrons. Many of the wagons carried groceries which the owners traded for farm produce, thus providing traveling store service to the farm wives.

A team system whereby one of the operators would make a trip to the selling terminals while the other toured the farm district buying up produce, was used by most of the hucksters.

Twice a week the accumulation of farm produce was taken to market in the city, usually on Tuesdays and Thursdays. On those mornings, regardless of weather, a caravan of from four to ten wagons adorned the highways to the city. As the caravan progressed in the darkness some began the drive early as 2 a. m.—the party would be joined along the route by other wagons until it resembled a wagon train of the western pioneer days.

Through the loom of every marriage, there run many threads, gay and dark, and it depends upon the dexterity of the weavers, whether the pattern will be bright and cheerful or dark and threatening.

When Byrd married Larry Browning, she had only known the sheltered life of a small town, but moving to Cleveland, she was soon hurled into the modern vortex that sucks at the youth of the city, whirling them about in the mad waters of extravagance, get-rich-quick business and soft living.

From the very beginning, Byrd began to struggle against the influences that were threatening her handsome, magnetic, speed-loving husband, influences which threatened to undermine his reputation and career, her own ambitions for a home and children and, lastly, the very foundations of their marriage.

For the elements that were combining against Byrd's happiness were many. Larry's partnership with unscrupulous Jack Duncan in a speculative scheme, floating the stock of the Builders' Supply company; Larry's continual loans from Byrd's father, who was president of a bank; the succession of parties with a fast moving crowd, consisting of Tiny and Fred Ockman, Jack and Mary Duncan, Chet Emerson and India Campbell, a former sweetheart of Larry's; Larry's refusal to break off his friendship with India, his growing extravagance; the increasing difference over bills, and economies which couldn't pay for the week's grocery bill but could afford a case of Scotch; and finally, the further rupture caused by Pat's visit, Byrd's young sister, who should have had a firm and disciplinary hand.

Unsuccessful in her many attempts to refine and educate Pat, who had become boisterous and a little wild, Byrd appealed to Larry; but Larry, more amused than worried, encouraged her waywardness by loaning her money and taking her to night clubs.

During Larry's absence on Builders' Supply matters, which had met with some success, Byrd visited her father and mother at Jacksonville to discuss with her father Larry's decision to invest five thousand dollars in a real estate company which Jack Duncan had just organized, and to borrow the money from Mr. Hamilton. On the condition that Byrd invest part of the money in a home and "a baby or two," Mr. Hamilton loaned her six thousand dollars. Byrd agreed to disavow Larry from the second venture, sell out his Builders' Supply Company interests, and go into business for himself.

Byrd took immediate steps to purchase a house as soon as she returned to Cleveland, galvanizing herself against all of Larry's objections. She had to clean up the apartment, which was very messy from a party that Pat and India had dropped there the night before.

Tiny driven in, bursting with the latest scandal, Jack Duncan had left his wife and children and was living at his club, and his wife, Margy, was about to file divorce proceedings and hinted that a woman whom they all knew would be involved.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXVI

"I think it's India!" stated Tiny. "I've seen them hunching together!"

Byrd's legs and arms seemed to reassemble again and she felt that she was once more whole. It was ridiculous to imagine that her name would be linked with Jack's just because he had a vanity case that belonged to her and his wife had found it.

"Larry says he's at a night club every night of his life with a different girl. A night club's just a health resort to him," laughed Byrd, again at ease. But she did have a fright!

It was nearly six o'clock, and Byrd was wondering what she and Pat would have for supper. Likely as not, Pat wouldn't be there for supper.

And just then Pat whisked in like a sharp blast. She affected the sensuous like a sudden dash of red pepper.

Byrd took one horrified look. A vague memory of her high school days glimmered through her mind, when, in a zoology class, they discussed "reversion to type." "But what about business school?" interrupted Byrd, sharply. "Father'd be rightfully disappointed. Of course I told him you had already started in."

Pat wrinkled her forehead. "Nice thing to tell him," she began. Then she crossed her mind. "I know you're cross enough with me to send me down the spiked plank," Pat's tone had become a grateful sweet.

"Honestly, I never heard you use so much slang," said Byrd, crossly. "All right, I'll cut it," said Pat, good-naturedly, "or use a little no-vacine to block off your nerves. I really couldn't stand business college right now in this hot weather. Let me keep this job until the fall term opens."

"But your clothes!" said Byrd. "Where in the world did you get all those gaudy things?"

"The floor manager suggested that I wear something a little more youthful," fibbed Pat.

Byrd actually jumped out of her chair and gave a funny, little, hysterical laugh.

OSBORN LUTHERAN CHURCH CELEBRATES FOUNDING SUNDAY

Founding of St. Mark's United Lutheran Church of Osborn, which took place December 20, 1848, was observed by a home-coming of former members and friends who joined with the congregation in celebrating the eightieth anniversary of the event Sunday.

The Rev. Joseph L. Stiller, D. D., Lancaster, O., newly-elected president of the Synod of Ohio, presided at the service which began at 10:30 o'clock Sunday morning.

A basket dinner followed the morning service and at 2 o'clock the anniversary service was held. The history of the congregation was read by O. P. Mitman, Springfield, whose family has been connected with the church throughout its long history.

Mrs. Anna Kauffman, also of Springfield, had a part in the program of the afternoon. Chester Miller, Cincinnati, and Clarence Mitman, Springfield, sang at both services.

Former pastors of the church brought greetings and messages from absent members and friends. These were read at the service.

Many former members and friends were present for the exercises in response to invitations sent to all persons, whose addresses could be learned, who have been connected with the church in the past.

The Rev. Harvey E. Crowell, pastor of the church, who was chaplain in the United States Army during the World War, had charge of the anniversary services.

Coolville, O., and treasurer, John J. Alliffe, Chicago.

The Athens Chapter was organized in 1927 and its headquarters are at 41 Mill St., Athens.

QUARTET LODGED IN JAIL FOR BURGLARY

Four suspects, including one girl, arrested by Springfield police Friday, are being held in the Greene County Jail on charges of having burglarized the country homes of O. A. Dobbins, Cedarville, Jamesstown, Pike, and Thomas Buck, south of Bowersville, the night of Sunday, November 25.

Secret investigation conducted by Sheriff Ohmer Tate climaxed in the arrest of three men and one woman and recovery of a part of the loot. Sheriff Tate brought the quartet to Xenia Saturday afternoon and they are expected to be arraigned before a Xenia Two-justice of the peace on Monday on charges of burglary and larceny.

The prisoners are: Ruth Lombard, 21, Henry Bldg., Springfield, no occupation; Paul Lowe, 30, 910 Montgomery Ave., Springfield, plasterer; John Thomas Mahoney, 32, same address, polisher; and Lee Allen, 22, R. R. No. 2, South Solon, truck driver.

"DUSTY" MILLER PENS OWN GREETING

"Dusty" Miller, of Wilmington, who has many times appeared before Xenia audiences, is addressing his many local friends with the following New Year's message:

lowing verse, in a New Year's greeting, titled, "Teasing Off"—

As you stand on the tee today
To drive off down a new fairway,
I hope you smack it straight and far,
And then hole out at least in part.

That all the round you're on your game,
Following through with best of aim;
Never a slice and nary hook
Are set against you on the book.

I hope you never short an up
Or miss a putt or rim the cup;
But keep your head and do your stuff,
And never once get in the rough.

Then when you turn in this year's card,
Have gone the distance, every yard,
The great Pro says: "Old man,
That's fine!"

You played that game in '29."
